

North Edinburgh Intergenerational Project

The North Edinburgh Intergenerational Project is a pilot project aimed at assisting the local community by increasing understanding between generations by:

- Mediation Interventions;
- Community Events;
- Conflict Resolution Workshops.

Relations between the generations in our communities are complex and do not always run smoothly as they should. We aim to assist the local community address many of the negative stereotypes of young and old people and highlight the negative impact these have on communities. We aim to break down barriers and open a channel of communication between the different generations.
