Sacro promotes safer communities across Scotland through the provision of high quality services aimed at reducing conflict and offending. Regarded as the leader in its field, Sacro provides services in criminal justice, conflict resolution and youth justice; and influences the development of public policy in these areas.

The current Chief Executive is retiring after many years of successful service. The organisation is also entering a period of significant change in the funding environment. This individual will therefore be capable of growing and developing the organisation, both in terms of turnover and diversification/expansion of core services (75 services across 26 locations).

A critical function of this key strategic leadership role is operational responsibility for the Corporate Management Group. Key priorities for the Chief Executive include governance, social entrepreneurship, organisational efficiencies, change management, external networking and influencing, media relations and funding strategies.

A strong commitment to Sacro's values and core services, with a track record of corporate and strategic leadership is essential. As the successful applicant you will have outstanding communication skills and have the ability to build key relationships, both internally and externally and to influence the criminal justice agenda. Experience within the voluntary and/or public sector is advantageous but not essential.
